Dear Harold,

Enclosed please find articles of particular interest. I've sent peices on The Cuban Missle Crisis and stories on Larry Schiller and Edward Epsteins new book on Armand Hammer. I thought you'd be interested in this stuff.

In regard to the Cuban Story, I find it difficult to believe that McNamara and LeMay were pushing JFK toward military action during the Cuban crisis.

If JFK would have taken the advice of LeMay or McNamara we very well might have had a nuclear war and I find that prospect and the counsel of these men to be incomprehensible. Can you comment on this? My own personal opinion of JFK's actions during the Cuban crisis is that he did the right thing, patiently waiting and using diplomacy to fend off the most dangerous threat to man that man has ever known. I shudder to think what would have happened if JFK had taken the advice of LeMay or McNamara.

How are you both doing and feeling? I hope you are both doing and feeling well. Everything with me is good, I really can't complain. Our baby and kids are doing well and my other 2 kids are really doing well in school.

Take Care,

Scott Wilson

PS Saw Posner's New book on Ross Perot entitled Citizen Perot in the stores, that is what he must have been working on this past year. Was going to buy a copy but I've no time to read it. Also saw Schiller's book on the OJ case but didn't buy it. It is too bad that the people don't know how uncredible a journalist Schiller is.
